Summary

Front-end web developer/designer, helping small businesses and artists create their dream websites. I focus on aesthetically pleasing design, and accessible UI. I am mostly self-taught, but I have coding experience starting from a very young age, as my interest was picked up on and developed by my dad who is a full-stack developer and now long-time IT Director/CTO.

Accessibility & Inclusivity

I am a proud queer trans man, and am physically disabled and autistic. I am very passionate about diversity and inclusivity across every aspect of my life and work, so I love working with fellow disabled and queer people to help them get the online presence and branding they might not otherwise be afforded. I also want to help make the internet a more inclusive and accessible place, and am constantly exploring and developing new ideas about how good web design can do this.

Experience

iTech Knowhow

2023 - Present | Marketing & Development Co-Ordinator

I work for iTech Knowhow; we supply fractional IT Directors to small & mid-sized businesses, mainly in the Midlands, but covering all of the UK.

Alongside administrative tasks, like handling emails, and managing Directors and clients, I have created a huge amount of content for the website. I have also contributed to the web design and development of the website, alongside coding assets for websites for other projects that iTech Knowhow has launched. I also do all of the social media, and create the marketing resources, with a focus on brand awareness and consistency.

Freelance Web Developer

2023 - Present

Clients:

XNDR Glass, 2025

Full stack website development and portfolio creation. Using HTML, CSS, PHP, and JavaScript.

Hobbies & Interests

As well as being a web dev, I am also a historian, specialising in gender and social history. My research interests are currently in death culture around the world, and in documenting transgender history.

Alongside my boring academic achievements, my interests are gaming, horror media, cats, cosplay and popular nerd culture in general. I'd also love to get into game development.
